It was about the first of March, 1943 when he was transferred again but his whereabouts remained unknown until a telegram from the nation's capitol revealed the news to his parents on New Year's Day, 1944 that he was killed in action on the 24th of December at Cape Mirkus, New Britain. Mild Weather Dries Cisterns

The abnormal dry weather of the last few months has caused many serious grass fires through out this section and kept local fire departments busy responding to fire calls. The Orland Park fire department had many calls last week.

Many cisterns and wells have gone dry. At the Capitol Dairy plant in Orland Park one well 125 feet deep went dry. Another 350 foot well is now in use.

The temperature has been hovering in the sixties the past few days and this has caused lilac bushes to start budding.

The extreme dry weather finally came to an end Thursday morning when a heavy rain swept this territory bringing much needed relief. The ground has been so dry that big fissures were noted in places.

This abnormal warm weather in January has no equal in the memory of the old inhabitants of this section.

Hundreds Attend Final Rites For Mrs. Lulu Rogers

Mrs. Lulu Rogers, one of Tinley Park's most beloved citizens died in the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island Sunday night at ten o'clock of injuries sustained when she was struck by a hit and run driver on Oak Park Avenue last Thursday night.

Mrs. Rogers had left her home about 7 o'clock and was walking on the shoulder of the paved road toward Tinley Park. There were no witnesses to the accident, but from all indications it is presumed that an autoist was trying to pass another car and in turning out of the way he got off the pavement, struck Mrs. Rogers and then sped away. The latter was too dazed to be able to tell just what happened. She had been knocked over in a ditch and laid there helpless for about 45 minutes before she was discovered.

Miss Erica Nasebandt, a nearby neighbor of Mrs. Rogers was walking along Oak Park avenue toward Tinley Park when she heard some one calling for help. She had a small flash light with her and flashed it in the direction from which the sound of the voice came and found Mrs. Rogers. She immediately got help in the nearby neighborhood. A passing car was flagged and she was taken to the office of Dr. R. H. Carmichael in Tinley Park. Examination revealed that Mrs. Rogers had suffered a broken leg, sedious injuries to her right arm besides numerous cuts and bruises. An ambulance was called and she was rushed to the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island, where in spite of all that medical skill and loving care could do, she passed away.

Mrs. Rogers was a member of a pioneer Tinley Park family who settled here in the early thirties. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fulton.

Mrs. Rogers was truly a friend and pal to all who had the privilege of knowing her. She was very active in the Tinley Park Methodist church and also in various civic associations. She was a member of the Eastern Star, the Tinley Park Camp of the Royal Neighbors PTA and the Garden Club. She was also active in the Citizens Service Committee of Tinley Park and kept in touch with the boys of the community in service by corresponding with them. Her entire life was one of service and devotion.

She was instrumental in founding the Tinley Park Methodist church. She made a canvass with horse and buggy of the entire Tinley Park territory soliciting funds for the erection of a Methodist church in Tinley Park. She was very successful in her undertaking and out of the little edifice started years ago has developed the present beautiful house of worship, in part of which

A blood donor is the grandest person in the world to all of those who serve with the blood bank.

Mrs. R. McGuire, chairman

the little church Mrs. Rogers helped found, is incorporated.

Lulu May Rogers nee Fulton was born on the Fulton farm north of Tinley Park January 22, 1879. On June 24, 1900 she was united in marriage with Daniel Rogers who died in September 1923. Following his death, Mrs. Rogers made her home with her brother Bert H. Fulton with whom she has since resided.

Surviving are one brother Ben H. Fulton, Tinley Park; one sister, Mrs. Minnie Argil, Chicago, two nieces Mrs. Howard Mager, Tinley Park, Mrs. Thomas, Washington, D. C., three nephews, Emory Fulton somewhere in England with the American army; Leslie and Ben Argile of Chicago and a host of friends.

The great outpouring of mourners attending the funeral services held Wednesday afternoon at the Tinley Park Methodist church demonstrated the high esteem in which this beloved citizen of Tinley Park was held by people in all walks of life. The body lay in state in the sanctuary of the church from Wednesday noon until 2 o'clock. The casket was set in a veritable flower garden of the most exquisite blooms. The floral offerings banked the entire front of the chancel and altar. The chimes in the church tower played softly until the funeral services began which were very impressive and beautiful in their simplicity.

Rev. J. L. McKelvey, pastor of the church, conducted the funeral assisted by Rev. L. E. Weinreich of Walnut, Illinois, his predecessor during whose pastorate the new church was built. Rev. John Holland, pastor of the radio church, "The Little Brown Church of the Air" of radio station WLS, also assisted in the service and in a reminiscent mood recalled that the little Tinley Park church was his first charge when he started in the ministry. He paid a glowing tribute to the beautiful life and good work done by the departed and told of being a frequent visitor in the Fulton home.

The main auditorium of the church as well as the balcony and basement were filled to capacity. A public address system was used outside of the main auditorium so all could hear the services. Arthur DeVol Jr. sang two very beautiful solos.

Interment was made in the Smith Cemetery in the family lot. The Lulu Rogers as her friends knew her is no more, but her spirit of love and devotion not only in her family circle, but in her church and in her community will live on as a memorial and tribute to her outstanding life.

She passed her 65th birthday last Saturday.

Washington, D. C.

PLENTY OF TRAINED PILOTS

General Arnold did not say so in his report to the secretary of war, but the tremendous job of expanding air forces personnel is almost finished. He might have penned a little footnote, saying, "We have pilots running out of our ears."

No cadet training bases have been closed as yet, but the army will close approximately one dozen schools for training pilots between now and April. Air forces officials find that the elaborate program has now produced enough competent navigators and pilots to finish the job in both theaters of war.

The tip-off to this is found in recent changes in policy of the transport command.

Army transport command, which does non-combat flying all over the world, has always preferred to take pilots from the open market, usually from the airlines. These pilots are specially trained in safe, efficient transport flying, as distinguished from the combat type of training in the army air forces.

Recently, however, transport command has been forbidden to take on civilian pilots, and has been forced to accept combat-trained pilots from the air forces.

MIRACLE WORKERS

Miracles happen, even in Washington. Farm Security administration, heir to all the grief of Rex Tugwell, and long confined to the Capitol Hill dog house, is now emerging into the warm sunlight of congressional favor. A simple matter of southern friendship did it.

The miracle resulted from the fact that Frank Hancock and Harold Cooley were a couple of congressmen from North Carolina. Hancock, now out of congress, has just been appointed head of Farm Security. Hence, Congressman Cooley, formerly FSA's deadliest critic, is now a supporter and friend.

All during the past year, FSA operated on a shoestring. Its funds were cut, and congress frowned on almost everything it tried to do. But now, a report of a house agriculture subcommittee which Cooley heads is about to give FSA a clean bill of health and recommend that it be continued as a permanent agency.

The report will not whitewash Mr. Tugwell or any of his works. In fact, it will sharply criticize all the old resettlement projects (already in process of liquidation). But it will give strong approval to two other FSA programs—rehabilitation and tenant purchase.

Also, there will be a proposal for combining the lending programs of Farm Security with two types of Farm Credit administration loans, with a new corporation to handle the joint lending activity.

EXIT BOMBSIGHT

There is every indication that the U. S. bombing to which the Japs will be subjected in 1944 will be without benefit of bombsight.

The Norden bombsight has been publicized as the great secret appliance which will help us win the war. It has been highly successful in the European theater, but in the Pacific it has actually become excess baggage.

Supply officers in Washington are still assigning bombsights to planes for Pacific action, but fliers are urging that the device be left at home. They have found that the most successful air attack in the Pacific is the low-level tree-top bombing, in which medium bombers sweep in on the target and let the bombs drop when they are so close they can't miss. This is better than any precision instrument ever invented.

Also, it is less dangerous than high-altitude bombing. Coming in low, the planes avoid detection by the enemy, whereas the high-altitude planes are caught both by instruments and vision.

The tree-top flying requires greater pilot skill, also the use of delayed-action bombs so that the plane can get away from the target before it blows up under the plane.

This is the kind of work that was done in the famous battle of the Bismarck sea, in which every Jap ship was destroyed. It was also how the Nazis sneaked up on Bori and wreaked havoc with Allied shipping.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

The budget bureau several times has offered Cordell Hull all the money he needs for the state department if he will only clean house and get in some good men.

The A. F. L. executive committee will finally vote John L. Lewis' mine workers into the A. F. L. at this month's meeting in Florida.

Harold Ickes and Henry Wallace, who didn't love each other too much when Wallace was secretary of agriculture, have made up. Jesse Jones (not love for him) brought them together.

Instead of cutting down red tape, the war department is increasing it. It opened the new year by requiring reception clerks at all entrances of the giant Pentagon building to ask no less than 14 questions of each visitor, and write down all answers on a pink, blue or yellow filing card. Guess the army thinks we are losing the war, not winning it.

Postwar Poland as Russia Wants It

According to plans announced by Moscow this is the possible geographic outline of Poland after hostilities cease. Russia proposes as Poland's new eastern boundaries, the Curzon line, suggested by the late Lord Curzon in 1919. Solid black areas are those parts of Poland which she would retain from the line of demarcation set by the German-Russian treaty of 1939, which in other respects matches the Curzon line. Poland would be enlarged by the acquisition of East Prussia, including the Danzig corridor, and Silesia.

This employee is working a press which prints 200 tokens a minute. Local banks will distribute the tokens to stores by February 27. On that date approximately 2 billions of the disks will be in use.

Precious water is doled out to natives on Makin island by men of the United States navy. The Japanese had prevented the natives from obtaining any water for three days before the American landing. Since our forces have invaded islands of the Gilbert group, Jap forces have retaliated only with nuisance air raids.

JESUS USES HIS POWER TO HELP

LESSON TEXT—Mark 4:35-41; 5:35-43.
GOLDEN TEXT—Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?—Mark 4:40.

Help—that is what man needs, and nothing but the power of Christ will suffice to meet his fears and sorrows. Christ appears in Mark as not only the matchless Teacher of the parables we have just studied, but the mighty Worker.

This is the Gospel in which Christ is presented as the Servant of Jehovah, who came to use His infinite grace and power for our deliverance.

Two great fears gnaw at the vitals of man's existence. Life is full of awful dangers, and death is so dreadfully final and sorrowful. He is afraid to live, and afraid to die—apart from his faith in Jesus Christ. We find the answer to both these fears as we here see—

Jesus' Power Overcomes
I. Fear of Life's Dangers (Mark 4:35-41).

The long day of teaching had ended (v. 35), and the disciples carried out His request that they go to the other side of the lake to rest. Just "as he was" they departed, and before long the tired Jesus was asleep. We know how He felt, and what is even more blessed, He knows how we feel when we are tired.

As He slept, a sudden storm (common on the Lake of Galilee) brought deathly fear to the hearts of His disciples. For the moment they saw only the angry waves, the smallness of their boat, and the hopelessness of their situation.

Had they forgotten Jesus? With Him in the boat, they had no reason to fear. They called on Him, and in His majestic and authoritative "Peace be still" the wind and waves recognized their Master's voice.

Should we not learn that in this day of fears and alarms, we may (if we are Christians) count on His presence and His power. If we look at the overwhelming waves of circumstances and think how frail we are, surely our hearts shall fail us for fear. But if Christ is with us, we are in no danger.

Now they were struck with awe at His power. "Sometimes the deliverances wrought by our Lord so reveal His presence and power that His followers are more deeply moved than they were by the perils which threatened. Whether mastering the storm, or standing unseen in our midst today, He appears to the eye of faith, clothed in divine energy and power" (Erdman).

II. Fear of Death's Deep Sorrow (5:35-43).

Trouble is a visitor in every home, it does not matter how securely that home may be founded upon wealth or social position. Frequently, death chooses a shining mark in taking a dearly beloved child. Children strike their roots deep into our hearts and when they are torn from us our whole beings are rent and convulsed. Such was the great storm of sorrow which had come upon the home of Jairus, leading him to make the brave step of faith and hope which brought him to Jesus.

Then as Jesus turned to go with Jairus a woman touched Him. He stooped to seek her out and command her for her faith. The seeming delay must have greatly troubled Jairus, particularly when the servants came and informed him that he need no longer trouble the Master since his daughter was dead. Not infrequently we have similar experiences, where it seems that while God has promised to help us, He has been turned aside and has forgotten us. The psalmist in Psalm 42:3 cries out, "My tears have been my meat day and night, while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God?"

Our Lord was not troubled at all by the message of the servants of Jairus, but He showed His thoughtful consideration of the father, by reassuring him with the words, "Fear not, only believe."

Everywhere fear blocks the way of human peace and progress. Divine wisdom offers a remedy for it all—only believe. We excuse our lack of faith by the conditions which confront us, but none of us face conditions worse than those which confronted Jairus. His daughter was dead and he was told to believe! He obeyed and his faith was rewarded.

When He said, "The child is not dead, but sleepeth," our Lord did not mean that actual death had not taken place, but He meant that in the sight of God death is like a sleep. In the eyes of Christ spiritual death was undoubtedly far more terrible than physical death. A man may be physically alive and yet being spiritually dead be worse off than a man who, though physically dead, is spiritually alive.

After putting forth the mourning scorners, the Lord performed a miracle by simply speaking to the child and saying, "Little girl, arise."

Here then is the Lord who can overcome every fear, in both life and death. Is He not the one we need as our Saviour?

BLACK SOMBREIRO

by CLIFFORD KNIGHT

Elsa Chatfield is disinherited by her Aunt Kitty who died of an overdose of morphine. Hunt Rogers and Barry Madison go to Mexico to solve what they believe to be Aunt Kitty's murder. On arriving they find that Elsa's party has preceded them by plane. James Chesebro is murdered. Elsa's father, Sam, meets death from the sword of a marlin when his chair breaks, toppling him into the sea, and George Rumble is murdered and thrown into the sea near the dock. Rogers questions Berta, Sam's wife, and on examining the quilt with which Elsa had beaten Chesebro discovers by twisting the knob that it conceals the knife that killed Chesebro.

Now Continue.

CHAPTER XVII

"In the presence of Senor Lombardo and realizing the implication in it that you killed Chesebro?"

For only a fraction of a second did she hesitate, then she answered calmly, "Yes."

Senor Otilio Lombardo, jefe del policia, came up the Orizaba's ladder the next day but one, followed by Dr. Miguel Cruz. On the heels of the doctor came the barefooted, ragged mariachis, Felipe and Pancho.

"I have puzzled much, gentlemen," remarked Lombardo in English after cigarettes had been lighted, "about the confession of Senorita Chatfield that she killed Senor Chesebro. I do not understand it, and I take no action. I had come that evening persuaded that it was better, despite your promise, that I keep Senor Barton in jail for the murder of Senor Rumble. But when Senorita Chatfield speak I am confused, senor, and do not know what is best to do."

A faint smile twitched at Rogers' lips and he looked away across the bay to the shore where the coco palms seemed to shoot like bursting green rockets into the sky.

"There are many confusing things in this affair, senor," he remarked. "They have puzzled me too, but I believe that I can explain them all now."

"I would be very glad if you would."

"Four persons have died, Senor Lombardo—Katherine Chatfield in California; James Chesebro, Sam Chatfield and George Rumble, in Mexico. The explanation must include all four. It must be logical and there must be proof."

"Yes, of course," said Rogers.

"Sam Chatfield and his wife, Berta, arrived in California for their annual visit a year ago last winter. They stopped at a hotel in Pasadena, and, uninvited, went to spend the night with his sister, Katherine—Elsa's Aunt Kitty. That night Katherine Chatfield was murdered. The method used was an overdose of morphine, to which drug she was an addict, taking it hypodermically.

A very faint odor of chloroform detected the next morning by only one investigator furnishes the single clue to what happened. A few drops of chloroform on a handkerchief, I believe, suddenly held to the unsuspecting victim's nose, and kept in place during the brief and violent struggle which probably followed, and the victim was unconscious. There was necessary only to load the hypodermic with an overdose of morphine and shoot it into the unconscious victim, wipe away all fingerprints from the syringe and the supply bottle, and press the prints of the victim on these things. Simple?"

"It is most simple, Senor Rogers," said Lombardo, a serious expression upon his round, brown face. "Either a man or a woman could have done that, senor," Rogers began again. "Now, consider these facts: Present in the house, besides the servants, who do not figure in it at all, was Sam Chatfield. He knew that his sister was the mother of a child. He knew that she not only had refused to acknowledge the fact, but had permitted his daughter, Elsa, to be cruelly slandered, and not only had done nothing to quiet the gossip, but most likely had been instrumental in circulating it."

"Also in the house that night was Elsa, who openly and frankly at all times, as you heard the other night, has admitted that she hated her aunt. Besides these two there was Senora Berta Chatfield, who ever since she married Sam had resented the treatment given her by her sister-in-law, and who, as a wife, knew how her husband felt toward Katherine Chatfield."

"There, Senor Lombardo," Rogers continued, "I have named three persons with motives to kill and obviously with the opportunity to do so. But there were others that night who came and went. George Rumble, who had done some publicity work for Katherine Chatfield, came to receive his pay, which was refused him. There was an argument and hot words, and Rumble left. But he remained in the neighborhood uncertain whether or not he should return. Did he go back and kill her?"

Rogers was developing very logically the facts in that first slaying, and Lombardo followed his words closely. Doctor Cruz sat smoking cornhusk cigarettes endlessly, his eyelids making mere slits for his eyes. Neither spoke.

"That night, also," Rogers went on evenly, "Reed Barton was at Katherine Chatfield's home to give her a book sent by Chesebro. Reed has been very frank to admit that his father's death—a suicide—can be laid at the dead woman's door. A little leniency shown in a critical time would have saved his property for him. Did Reed Barton kill her?"

"James Chesebro arrived and departed that night; we do not know why, the reason for his visit never having been explained before his death. Did he have some motive to kill the woman? Next came Dwight Nichols." Rogers nodded in Dwight's direction. The latter merely sat and smoked calmly, listening without offering to interrupt.

"Dwight Nichols profited by some two hundred thousand dollars at the death of Katherine Chatfield, because of some jointly owned property. Dwight has stated that he was summoned, for some reason unknown to him, to advise with Miss Chatfield. Margaret Nichols was jealous of Katherine Chatfield, because she feared her husband's love was being stolen from her. She, also, made a visit that night. However, Mrs. Nichols says she got only as far as the entrance hall when someone dashed out of the house in panic, someone who, she says, did not see her concealed behind some drapery. That person admittedly was her husband. Dwight Nichols says that he arrived only to find Katherine Chatfield dead. Is he telling the truth? Is his wife telling the truth; did either, or both, of them kill the woman?" Rogers halted to sip from his frosty glass.

"And finally, there is Elsa," said Rogers thoughtfully.

"It is all very strange, Senor Rogers," said Lombardo, stirring uneasily in his chair. "How can you discover the truth in so complicated a case?"

Rogers smiled faintly, and I thought that there was the merest twinkle in his mild blue eyes. "If," he began again, "we exclude from suspicion all those persons who subsequently died by violence—Chesebro, Sam Chatfield, George Rumble—as victims of and not themselves the probable killer, whom have we left?" He glanced from Doctor Cruz to Lombardo, then named them: "Elsa Chatfield, Senora Berta Chatfield, Margaret Nichols, Dwight Nichols, and Reed Barton. Those five."

"Now, then," Rogers said, a crispness coming into his voice, "we come to the death of James Chesebro. Of these five who could possibly wish him to die? Senora Berta Chatfield? I can think of no reason; I know of no motive, in fact. On the other hand, Reed Barton and Chesebro quarreled with each other over the love of Elsa Chatfield. Chesebro had discharged Barton from his employment. An excellent motive," he commented. "But—Dwight Nichols had been defrauded by Chesebro of fifty thousand dollars in a mining deal. That is a lot of money. Men have been murdered before now for much less, Senor Lombardo. And how about Margaret Nichols, the wife? Again fifty thousand dollars is a lot of money—to a woman."

"Yes, of course, much money," murmured Lombardo, absorbed in his own mental processes. "And, finally, there is Elsa," said Rogers thoughtfully. "Hers is a stronger motive than all the others put together, senor. A young woman's good name is her most valuable possession. You are Mexican, and can understand the word revenge. Elsa was willing night before last to permit the inference that she had killed Chesebro. Senor, is Pedro, the pulque seller, a lying scoundrel who seeks to protect a woman, or does he tell the truth when he says that Dwight Nichols is the one who killed?"

Lombardo's face was puzzled; he was now hopelessly at sea. A frown had gathered on the forehead between the slitted eyes of Doctor Cruz as he followed the intricacies of the problem as set forth by Rogers. As for Rogers, I could not escape the conviction that he was enjoying himself hugely at the expense of Lombardo. His face, however, was more solemn than that of a judge. Lombardo started slightly at Rogers' question.

"Yo no se, senor," he admitted, reverting to Spanish in his confusion.

"I think, Senor Lombardo," said Rogers, dropping with a smile into Spanish, "you will let Pedro out of jail when I finish telling you who is the guilty person." Lombardo's only response was an involuntary lifting of the eyebrows.

"However," Rogers took up again in English in a more serious vein, "the name of the guilty one must wait a few minutes longer. I will come to it at the proper time. But now let us look for a moment at the death of Sam Chatfield. His is the most puzzling in the entire series. So much seems accident, so little may have been the handiwork of a murderer. A nut had come unscrewed from the swivel mechanism of the chair in which Sam sat in the launch. If the chair had not collapsed, there is little likelihood that he would have fallen overboard, probably none at all. Did somebody remove the nut? There was opportunity to do so for everybody who went on the fishing excursion, and even for George Rumble, who did not go. All of us, except the women members of the party, knew beforehand that Sam Chatfield would sit in that chair when we went after marlin."

"And, yet, I know of no motive upon the part of anyone for the death of Sam Chatfield. Of course, one never knows what's between a husband and a wife. Did Senora Chatfield have some motive unknown to us, and did she learn in some manner which seat her husband would occupy on that fatal excursion in the launch? But—let's drop Sam Chatfield's death for the moment, and go on to George Rumble's. I think that in it we will find something of interest—perhaps the key we are seeking."

Lombardo shifted in his chair and looked away for a moment to the tall towers of the church. Doctor Cruz crushed out the spark in his cigarette under his heel, and for a moment his hands were idle. The mariachis were growing restless, understanding nothing that had been said in English. Reed Barton sat easily with legs crossed, and Dwight continued calmly to smoke.

"There are motives recognizable in the death of George Rumble," Rogers began once more. "For Margaret Nichols there was no opportunity. Senora Chatfield has admitted she went to the wharf that night to find someone to send for her husband's fishing equipment. Felipe and Pancho went on that errand for her. She returned to the yacht. She asserts, however, that she did not see Rumble, who was murdered on the wharf that night. There was a motive for the murder of Rumble on the part of Dwight Nichols; he and Rumble quarreled only a short time before Rumble died. Rumble knew that Dwight was the man who rushed in panic out of Katherine Chatfield's house the night she was murdered; he held it over him, as it were, and Dwight believed it was for the purpose of blackmail. After the two separated, Dwight, in the presence of Barry Madison, Sam Chatfield and me, made a remark which could be interpreted as a threat. He said that he would have to manage some way to quiet Rumble definitely."

Dwight was unmoved by this recital; he tapped the ash from his cigarette and continued to gaze calmly at Rogers. The latter paused to sip his glass of limeade before he went on.

"Another motive, not so strong, perhaps, is one that can be assigned to Reed Barton. George Rumble had fallen in love with Elsa. You knew that didn't you, Reed?"

"Yes."

"Again, Senor Lombardo," said Rogers, turning back to the chief, "love is a possible motive. How strong? How shall it be evaluated?" He paused only briefly. "However, there's a very definite motive, and I think the real one, to account for Rumble's murder—Rumble knew too much. He boasted that he knew who the killer was. What, in that case, will a murderer do? He will strike at the first opportunity, for he prizes his safety above all else. And that's what happened."

Lombardo stirred uneasily in his chair. "Who, Senor Rogers," he asked, "heard Senor Rumble boast that he knew the murderer?"

"Barry Madison, Sam Chatfield, Dwight Nichols, and I."

"So?"

Reed Barton shifted his feet and cleared his throat lightly. "I shouldn't be left out, Hunt. Rumble hinted very broadly to me that he knew who killed Chesebro, then closed up like a clam when I asked him about it."

Rogers looked at him sharply, as if to determine whether the statement was made in a vein of bravado, or because he wished to be helpful. For a moment he was silent and then appeared to shift his approach to the problem of Rumble's murder.

'Cannibalism' in Flock Should Be Prevented

Adding Salt to Feed Reduces Pecking

"Cannibalism" in one form or another is fairly common among young chicks, growing pullets, and laying birds, according to "Brooding and Rearing Chickens" by W. E. Newlon and V. S. Asmundson of the U. of California. This practice should be promptly discouraged, the authors say.

In young chicks, toe picking is the commonest form of cannibalism encountered, but picking of other parts may also follow if the toe picking is not checked. In slightly older birds feather picking is common. A limited amount of apparently harmless feather picking sometimes occurs, but it may develop to the point where the birds are completely naked and may lead to cannibalism.

Some outbreaks of cannibalism are perhaps to be regarded as purely accidental. Chicks pick at each other's toes and, if blood is drawn, the picking may develop into a vice unless it is promptly checked. Such accidental cases are not likely to cause serious difficulties if the birds receive regular attention.

Other outbreaks of cannibalism are caused by overcrowding, hunger, usually a result of irregular care, chilling, overheating, or general discomfort, and inactivity. Regular care of the birds and keen observation will do much to prevent outbreaks of cannibalism.

Picked birds should be promptly removed and the offenders also removed if possible. Young chicks that have been picked should have pine tar or other adhesive anti-pick ointments applied to the affected parts. It is usually advisable to isolate them for a few days. The cause should be looked for and, if found, corrected.

To check the vice, common salt may be added to the mash. The salt content of the ration should be increased to 2 or 3 per cent for a few days only. Mash usually contains about 1 per cent of salt; hence, 1 or 2 per cent should be added. If this is not effective, the salt may be increased to 4 per cent. When grain and mash are fed, the amount of salt added should be correspondingly increased. For instance, if the birds are eating equal parts of mash and grain and the mash contains 1 pound of salt in each 100, then an additional 3 pounds of salt should be added to each 100 pounds of mash. The high salt mash should not be fed for more than a few days.

Protective Devices. Outbreaks of cannibalism among older birds can usually be checked or prevented by the use of various mechanical devices which are now on the market. Unfortunately, however, none of these are known to be infallible, because losses may occur in spite of their use.

Tipping the beak is also recommended to control severe outbreaks. The edge of the upper beak is cut in about one-eighth inch, one-third to three-sixteenths inch from the tip, according to the size of the beak and the length of the tip. Then by prying and pulling with the flat side of the knife, the point of the beak is removed by tearing and not by cutting. Thus the tip of the beak is removed to the quick so that it is tender for a while and is left in such shape that the bird cannot firmly grasp either feathers or flesh. About three weeks is required for the beak to grow out again and by that time the habit is usually broken.

Experience at the Western Washington experiment station indicates that there is more feather picking when pelleted mash is fed, and that there is less picking when rations high in fiber are fed than when rations are low in fiber.

Agricultural Notes

The natural color of milk is due to the refraction of light from the suspended material and to the carotene and vitamin G contained in it.

Restrictions limiting use of binder twine to mechanical harvesting have been removed by the WPB. This means farmers will now be permitted to use binder twine for growing, harvesting or shipment of agricultural products.

Water rings on varnished furniture can often be removed by rubbing them with a cloth dipped in camphor. Work quickly and wipe dry with a clean, soft cloth. When dry, rub with furniture polish, applied on a soft cloth.

Odorous foods like sauerkraut, fish, strong cheese, or broccoli should always be covered before they are placed in the refrigerator to prevent their tainting other foods.

When sewing something that requires a good bit of thread, fill several bobbins before you begin. Then all you will have to do is replace the empty bobbin with a full one. This saves time and patience, and one can sew steadily for a long time.

Save half on tablecloth laundry by turning over the cloth when one side is surface soiled.

Frayed carpet edges can be prevented from further fraying by applying binding tape.

Never use a coarse, gritty scouring powder on any enameled part of a stove. It is likely to destroy the surface glaze.

SERVICEMEN'S NEWS

Australia, Dec. 2, 1943

Dear Friends:
I am writing you a few lines to let you know that I received your nice Christmas gift, and don't know how to thank you for it. You can bet your life that it sure was appreciated very much. I just got back from my seven days furlough last week. My first furlough since I have been in the army.

I had a wonderful time and saw a lot of things I didn't see before. I was cutting hair the other day and got the surprise of my life when I saw John Lehmann. I didn't recognize him at first. He's the first one I met that I know in Tinley since I been in the army.

Boy it was good to see somebody you know in Tinley. I did not get much time to talk to him because I sure was busy cutting the boys hair. As I just got back from my furlough and they all needed a hair cut.

John said that he hadn't received any Tinley Park Times for a long time so I showed him the Times that I got a couple days ago. I guess I better close now as I got a lot of other letters to write before the lights go out.

Before I close I want to wish you all in Tinley a very merry Christmas.

Pfc. Samuel Greco

Dec. 26, 1943

Received our most welcome package and wish to thank you very much. Needless to say, my roommates and I enjoyed (and very quickly disposed of) the food, and I had to really hold on to the greater part of the stationery in order to have any for myself.

The weather here has taken a change for the better, the rainy season just about being over, in fact this morning it was like a balmy spring morning. Having two whole days to myself, I'm taking time off to write my letters as I doubt if I will have any time for the next few weeks.

Thank you again for your thoughtfulness and everyone of my roommates wishes she had a town as kindly as mine. May the New Year be prosperous and Happy for you all.

Sincerely,

Irene Lahti, Palm Beach, Fla.

Among the letters received by Geo. Sangmeister, president of the Frankfort Fire Dept., thanking the organization for the Christmas gift of cash sent to them, is an interesting note from Lt. Paul Gerhold, written Jan. 19 as follows:

"I want to thank you very much for the unexpected gift which I found to be most useful, and tell you the story of its travels before it reached me.

"As you know, it was sent to Camp White, Oregon. It so happens that the outfit I was with there has gone overseas, so the letter went from Oregon all the way to England, and then back again to Ft. Lewis, Wash. which is my present permanent station. At Ft. Lewis it was again readressed and finally caught up with me here in Virginia just a couple of days ago. As I figure the mileage, it looks something like this: Joliet to Oregon, 2,000 miles; Oregon to England, 6,300 miles; England to Washington 6,400 miles; Washington to Virginia 3,300 miles, a total of 18,000 miles. However you look at it, 18,000 miles is a lot of travel for just three cents. But at any rate, it finally came limping in, intact if a bit ragged, and made me very happy that you had remembered me. Thanks very much. Paul E. Gerhold.

Warning From Cook Co., Treasurer

County Treasurer Victor L. Schlaeger, warns 1942 delinquent real estate owners that his office is sending out notices of delinquency to country town and city taxpayers who are behind in the payment of their taxes; that unless they pay their back 1942 taxes within ten days of their notice, their property will go to sale.

Interest and penalties will be added to all unpaid bills.

Schlaeger says if any taxpayer hasn't received his 1942 bill or has misplaced it, and thereby hasn't paid the bill, his office will, on request render a new bill.

The treasurer also asks all taxpayers who have moved or sold their property to notify him of the change of address. Last year many property owners did not receive their bills because of change of address and a penalty was added. Purchasers of property should notify the treasurer, he says, of this fact so that they can have the address of the bill corrected.

IT'S IN THE AIR. You can feel it, every time the Axis is struck. This is the climax year, the year of decision.

In history, 1944 will be the big year of the war—every stroke for victory counts more now. That's why it's vitally important for every American to be at his post, doing his part right now.

You, personally, have an important job in winning the war—buying War Bonds. It's not glamorous—no, not even a sacrifice, really, because you are only lending your money, to be returned with interest. But it is essential to complete victory.

Your part in this year of decision is at least one extra $100 Bond, above your regular Bond buying. That is your minimum individual quota. But don't stop there. Remember wars are won only by all-out effort. So buy $200, $300, $500 worth—buy more than you can afford. And buy your Bonds where you work—at the plant or at the office.

Your country is counting on you—let's make the year of decision OUR year!

This sticker in your window means you have bought 4th War Loan securities.

Lincoln Estates Man Was In Fierce Fight At Tarawa

We are in receipt of the following highly interesting letter from Mrs. K. M. Cook, of Lincoln Estates:

"I am enclosing an article from the Chicago Herald-American which reads as follows:

"It was some scrap."

"This was the battle of Tarawa summed up by Platoon Sgt. Donald H. Senger, of the marines, who is convalescing at the home of his mother, Mrs. Edna Heile of 100 S. Harvey ave., Oak Park from shrapnel wounds received in the historic encounter.

"A veteran of the Guadalcanal invasion, Sgt. Senger was with the first detachment to land at Tarawa.

"During the fighting Senger's boat was sunk and half of his men were killed or wounded. He swam ashore and was wounded shortly after, but managed to remain in the battle."

"My husband fought with him at Tarawa.

"Sgt. Senger came out to visit us, Sunday, January 9th and told me my husband, Pfc. Kenneth Cook came through O. K. He also was in the first outfit of marines to land. He was on the same boat which was sunk and he had to swim to shore where he fought for four days and came thru unharmed. He is now resting up on an unnamed island somewhere in the South Pacific.

crease the available labor supply and that is the one thing that will help the farmer most, he insisted.

Carl Bormet, of Tinley Park chairman of the Cook County war board, said a $2400 a year ceiling would not affect farm workers except possibly some farm managers. Jacob Ouwenga, of Blue Island, president of the Cook County Farm Bureau asserted any attempt to regulate the farmer is dangerous.

"I think Washington has far more important things to do than attempt to regulate the price of farm labor", said Louis W. Pohlman of Arlington Heights. He could see little benefit in Jones' proposal and feared that it would be a danger to future food production.

Palos Hostel Receives AYH Charter

Mr. Geo. Brown of Maywood, Ill., chairman of the local committee sponsoring the Palos Park Youth Hostel at Palos Park, Ill. today received the official AYH Charter for the current year from the National Headquarters of American Youth Hostels at Northfield, Mass. Members of the committee on whose behalf Mr. Brown received the charter are:

Mr. Leslie Salter, Mrs. Laura Roston, Mr. Lloyd Westby, Mr. A. H. MacGregor, Miss Clara Myerick Mrs. Wm. Wollenberg, Mr. Ross Dickson.

The committee will present the charter for the 7th time to the hostel; the houseparents are Rev. and Mrs. Paul T. Sanders. In 1943 40,927 overnights were recorded in the 255 Youth Hostels in the United States. Open the year round, the hostel has accommodations for 20 girls and 20 boys in separate bunk rooms. Cooking is provided for with an ample supply of pots and pans as well as a cook stove.

Hostelers come by bike or on foot less frequently by horseback, canoe or on skis. They travel for fun, for health and for a knowledge of the country (its people, its agriculture its industries). They find of special interest in our vicinity: Indian Trails in Cook County Forest Preserve; Chicago museums.

Hosteling today is feeling a definite increase in interest and impetus in its work due to the fact that there is a stepped up need for hosteling. Factory and defense workers who have only short vacations, children of pre-factory age whose parents are working; soldiers on furlough—all crave the refreshment and friendliness of hosteling.

Schools and Boards of Education are seeing the possibilities of using hosteling in connection with their curricula. Through hosteling youngsters may enjoy a field trip on a big scale, learning thereby a real love of their country coming from actual experience and knowledge.

The American Youth Hostels are now going through a period similar to that which English Hostels have just experienced, resulting there in a spectacular growth of Youth Hostels. The English Government has seen the present great need of hosteling and it is backing the British AYH with very substantial financial aid. The British Association is hoping to use army camp sites and other government property for Youth Hostels after the war.

Youth Hosteling is now more generally a brief weekend of refreshment and vigor or holiday period between semesters for college and high school students than a full time summer of vacation travel. Overnights this year in the American Youth Hostels have amounted to 40,927 bringing the total of nine years of hosteling to 279,543. It is estimated that hostlers have traveled "under their own steam" the Youth Hostler way, by bike or afoot, horseback or canoe about eight and one-half million miles in America or nearly three thousand times across the entire continent.

A new aspect of hosteling this year is the Local Council which is provided to meet the ever increasing demand for the setting up of more extensive community use of hostels.

Cook County Farm Wage Control Program

Cook County farmers last week viewed War Food Administrator Marvin Jones' proposal to establish a wage control program for agricultural workers as a move that would contribute no benefit to the farm labor situation and might be another serious step in the regimentation of the American farmer.

C. A. Hughes, Cook County farm agent, said he could see no benefit in establishing a ceiling of $2,400 a year, since most farm workers earn less than that, and could foresee considerable harm in regulations that would result in disgruntled workers who would be of little or no use to the farmer.

The big problem in farm labor is to meet the rising prices paid by industrial plants, Hughes said. Some farmers had to pay seasonal help last summer as much as $10 a day.

That price was paid, the help was obtained, and the crops were harvested. However, if someone in Washington or other centers controlled the situation, there might have been no help and the nation would have lost the food, Hughes pointed out.

Establishing ceilings or setting up other limitations will not in-

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I want to express my thanks to you in your sending me the News-Bulletin every week. It gives you the feeling of security, that you know what is going on back home. There are a lot of boys from the north down here also, and to receive a paper from home, it means a lot.

I'm not trying to slur other papers or bring back the civil war, but it seems that every paper you Texas is winning the war, which pick up in Texas, specifics that I'm not saying they are not. I'm sure that every northern boy in Texas will heartily agree with me. I think that is about the best reason can give for looking forward to the News-Bulletin every week or maybe it is a little touch of homesickness that I get every time I receive your paper.

I remain sincerely yours,
Pvt. Kenneth Benson.

NEWS FLASH! Paper hangers lose two games, V-Eighters win two and the Phillips 66 steamrollers roll on.

Gus Braun's Smokers must have put some sweet dreamy tobacco in the Paperhangers pipes as they were very peaceful after the start of the first game. In fact they looked as contented as Ferdinand the Bull, when they did wake from their dreamy siesta much to their astonishment the Smokers had eased them out of two games.

The Cooper and Hostert team finally got enough gas to put the Bankers two games in red. The V-Eighters again changed their lineup in order to make up a winning combination and have at least been successful for one night.

The Mokena Oilers continued to move on as they won their eight straight series when they took the Robins for two games. Looks like Charlie and red made a good move in having Charlie lead off as they haven't lost a series since.

Well bowling fans, reserve a ring side seat on alley's 3 and 4 next Monday night as the first place paperhangers meet the red hot Oilers who are in second place two games behind. It threatens to be a battle if the Paperhangers are aroused from their siesta and the Oilers do not fold up from the terrific pace.

The joint meeting of the Methodist Youth Fellowship of the Tinley Park and Orland Park Methodist churches held at the Orland church last Sunday evening was attended by excellent representations of both churches. An inspiring message was brought by Rev. R. J. L. McKelvey, pastor of the Tinley Park church. In a social hour which followed the meeting, the young folks of both groups found ample opportunity to get acquainted and exchange ideas and to mingle on the common ground of christian service and good fellowship which is the fundamental purpose of these meetings. Refreshments were served with the Orland group hosts.

Gordon Cooper is President of the Orland Park Fellowship. A cordial invitation is extended to attend the meeting of the Cook County Friends of Public Health on Monday, January 31, at 1:30 pm. in the Chambers of the Board of Commissioners of Cook County, County Building Randolph and Clark Sts., Chicago. Estela Ford Warner, MD. Senior Surgeon, States Relations Officer, US Public Health Service, District 3, Chicago will be the guest speaker and will discuss Community Public Health Surveys. This will be one of the outstanding meetings of the year and we believe it will enable you to take back to your community some stimulating ideas on Public Health.

UPPER BAY, MOBILE, ALA.—It was just about daybreak. A sweeping gale, half hurricane, came out of the northeast, accompanied by a cold, driving rain.

"A perfect day to kill ducks," the guide said. He had overlooked the fact that it was a much more perfect day to kill men. The wind roared, the rain whipped in, the small boat rolled and soon was half full of water.

"You couldn't find a better day for ducks," the guide said. There were ducks everywhere, but there was a lot more rain and wind and bumping water in the bay.

We finally reached the blind. Ahead was the job of getting out the decoys and the cane for the camouflage.

We get the skill into the blind position as another half-tidal wave hits us and we really get to work. Part of the decoys are swept overboard. Part of the cane for the blinds go with the decoys. Your correspondent would like to go with both and end it all.

It still isn't quite daylight and the storm is picking up speed and hitting power. It is also getting colder and colder, wetter and wetter, rougher and rougher, tougher and tougher.

Everyone is soaked and freezing. But everyone is happy except your correspondent who has suddenly decided he has no hostile feeling against any duck. In fact he likes ducks. But it is too late now. We are out in the middle of a virtual tidal wave to mow them down.

Where Real Fun Begins

Now we are all set in the blind, with a sand bar close at hand.

Here come the ducks—teal, redhead, mallard, widgeon, sprigtail, black duck, canvas back, dough-grey, every known form of the duck breed. A big part of this display was due to "Ducks Unlimited," a fine sporting organization.

And there were DUCKS UNLIMITED.

The ducks were doing all right. But I kept thinking why should man be subjected to this punishment.

"Here they come," our guide said. "Get low—get low."

We got low. At this moment another swirl of wind and rain overturned our boat.

Mind you, it was bitter cold, and much colder as our clothing became drenched.

"We missed that raft, cap, but they'll be back. Workin' over to another bay. But they'll be back just as soon as we get straightened out again—set, you know," said our amiable guide.

I turned to a fellow named Stout Steve Owen, coach of the New York Giants, who was in the next boat. I could see that Owen's 280-pounds were in agony. He was taking an even worse beating, for he was a much bigger target.

"Bring me the Bears and the Redskins," he growled. "Bring me Baugh and Luckman."

At this spot a rush of water swept Owen out of sight. And this is true. I'll admit at that time I wasn't interested in what happened to Owen. I was only interested in a fellow named Rice.

We got on a mud bar or a sand bar again, and it took us 50 minutes to get away, losing a paddle and a few more decoys.

Suddenly, someone fired a gun and a teal blew out to sea. He was dead—and he was lucky.

We got set again with thousands of duck swarming in.

We were ready for the big killing. But once again another half-hurricane struck us with another rush of water, and once again the boat went under—and so did we.

By this time the wind had reached a velocity of 50 miles an hour and the rain was a young deluge. Under these conditions you couldn't hit an elephant at 5 paces.

Had the teals and mallards and redheads and widgeons been smart, they could have murdered us. For we were whipped.

Soaking wet, battered and beaten, half-drowned, aching and cursing, we only wanted to find "Red" Leatherbury's houseboat, with Pat Moulton, my favorite director, leading the way.

The ducks were not smart—we were not smart—but who is in this cockeyed world?

Cobb's Favorites

Irvin S. Cobb, the humorist, who is recuperating in New York after a serious illness, was reminiscing about the old-time sports characters the other day.

"What a baseball parade has gone by since those days," Cobb reflected.

"I mean Christy Mathewson and Roger Bresnahan—Three-Fingered Brown and Johnny Kling—Walter Johnson, Rube Waddell, Eddie Collins, Joe Jackson, Ty Cobb, Nap Lajoie and Shoeless Joe Jackson.

HAROLD ("JUG") McSPADEN'S great victory in the Los Angeles Golf Open more than justified the faith a great many followers had in him.

Always a steady golfer, and at times even brilliant, the 35-year-old Philadelphia pro put together a 69-72-71-66 for a 72-hole total of 278, cracking the Wilshire Country club course record by 3 strokes. He butchered old man par by 6.

McSpaden fired six birdies—and one bogey—in fashioning his sensational last round. His efficient putter never failed him and only one out-of-bounds shot marred his shot-making. Otherwise it was close to perfect golf.

Things have been on the upgrade for Jug during the past year. He has won 4 of his last 6 tournaments, among them the All-American in Chicago. His Los Angeles victory netted him $4,375 in war bonds as first prize money.

The Headlines

It was reminiscent of better times to see competitive golf draw big headlines again. The game has suffered much in the last two years. Many of the big name players are in service and the few tournaments of today rarely capture the national interest.

Golf has turned out to be a real American game. England and Scotland are represented by many great names, including Harry Vardon, Henry Cotton, George Duncan, J. H. Taylor and many others. But the combined list can't be compared to the roster of stars native to the United States.

Names like Bobby Jones, Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Francis Ouimet, Jack McDermott, Byron Nelson, McSpaden, Ben Hogan, Tommy Armour, Craig Wood, Sammy Snead, Harry Cooper, Lawson Little, Ed Dudley, Billy Burke, Bob Cruikshank, Macdonald Smith, etc., will have a permanent place in golf's record book. A few of them—including Smith, Armour and Cruikshank—came from Scotland, but they won golfing fame as citizens of this country.

Why has America developed so many champions? The answer is the same for golf as it is for boxing, baseball, basketball and almost any other sport. The amount and kind of competition breeds champions. Americans are deadly serious about their sports. They don't take them in a leisurely, off-hand manner.

The Winter Circuit

Golf is no longer a summer sport for the top-notchers. The long, hard winter and spring tours from coast to coast have a great deal to do with turning out winners. These off-season tours are tough. They force the player to stay in year-round condition, mentally and physically. Concentration and determination are essential to the player who hopes to do more than break even on the winter circuit.

Par means practically nothing to the Nelsons, McSpadens, Hogans, etc. A par score would give them no more than tenth place in the average tournament.

The pros who win consistently are the hardest workers. Golf to them is a business, not a form of recreation. They work as hard to perfect play with each club as the lawyer does to prepare a brief.

Above all, Americans have a deep-seated desire to win. Obviously no one relishes defeat, but few athletes will work as hard to win as those of our country. Some other nations are developing that spirit, but we still have a fairly comfortable lead.

That such efforts pay dividends is evidenced by the records—in golf as in the many other sports where American athletes enjoy unchallenged supremacy.

SPORTS SHORTS

1. The Cincinnati Reds lost $500 in 1942 and made $18,000 in 1943.

2. Bill Hulse, who set a new American mile record (outdoors), is a research chemist.

3. Bill Meyer, who will manage Newark again in 1944, has been a Yankee farm manager for 12 years.

4. Approximately 500 men have won the football "A" at West Point, including 2 four-star generals, 2 lieutenant generals, 20 major generals, 38 brigadier generals and 90 colonels.

BERLIN, WIS., IS PROSPERING; BUT WANTS 'BUNGLING' STOPPED

Coddling of Labor Unions Is Unpopular; Small Business Man Seen as Hope of America's Future.

By BARROW LYONS

(EDITOR'S NOTE—This is one of a series of articles written for this paper by Barrow Lyons, staff correspondent of Western Newspaper Union. He has just completed an extended trip through the nation and in these reports gives his first-hand impressions of what rural America is thinking as we enter the third year of war and the first weeks of a presidential election year. Any opinions expressed are the writer's and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

BERLIN, WIS.—Farmers today are pulling big figure bills out of their pockets to buy the wares of Berlin, Wisconsin, merchants. Never before has such big money been handled in ordinary trade here. During World War I people used $20 bills—but now they use $50 bills. The other day a farmer brought a check from a grain company for $500 into a Berlin bank and asked for ten $50 bills.

Berlin never knew greater prosperity. Its traditional fur business is not doing quite as well as usual because pelts are scarce, but it has a war plant which employs about 600 persons; its leather goods manufacturing is booming with war orders and the farmers who own some of the best dairy farms in Wisconsin are prosperous. Altogether this town of about 4,300 persons is thriving extremely well.

Berlin, however, is not prospering quite as exuberantly as Paxton (Ill.), because dairying is not as profitable today as raising corn. Cattle have to be fed; and virtually every kind of feed is scarce. "Bootleg" corn—corn being sold above OPA ceilings—is being bought in and around Berlin at $1.42 a bushel, even as high as $1.65, compared with a legal ceiling of $1.05. Oats are bringing as much as 96 cents a bushel.

With this background of prosperity the most prosperous people of Berlin are thoroughly dissatisfied with Washington. Many are convinced that President Roosevelt, or at least "Mrs. Roosevelt and the men who surround the President," are quite deliberately attempting to convert the United States into a socialistic state, and are going about it with diabolical cleverness. They have done, a subsidy, some form of charity. Those men will be supplanted by a brand of new progressives who have a real faith in the people of America—and the calamity howlers will be swept out like autumn leaves.

Mr. Patey uses the word bureaucracy a good deal. By that he means the overmultiplication of government bureaus by administrators determined to entrench themselves in public office and increase their political power. He sees evidence of this on all sides, but the demonstration given by the National Youth administration in Berlin has made one of the deepest impressions upon him.

Big Business Can't Smash Little Fellow

As for the place of small business after the war, Frank D. Chapman, owner and president of the Berlin-Chapman company, believes big business can never crush the small fellow.

"Matter of fact, a man with real business ability can make more money running a small business himself than he can as president of a great corporation," said Mr. Chapman. "Most of the smartest men I know in business are doing just that."

So is Mr. Chapman. Before the war he made machinery for canning factories, having many patented devices to his credit. Now he is turning out machinery for the production of synthetic rubber, high octane gasoline and chemicals used in warfare. In addition, he is making compressors, which until recently were among the most critically needed of the critical components of war production. But he entertains no warmth for the administration, although in 1932 and 1936 he ran on the Democratic ticket. The local Democrats, who put most of their candidates into office then, could not accept him as a thoroughgoing member of their party.

"The administration is making a sloppy job of the war," he asserted. "The first New Deal taught people to be bums, and now they're trying to teach them to go to work, but they learned the first lesson too well. Labor leaders came out here and told people to seize the factories. 'Maw' Perkins said she didn't see anything against sitting down. It'll take another generation of Americanism to get the workers back to working the way they did ten years ago."

"The New Deal has seen fit to place its war contracts where it got its votes. It still places them in centers of the United States which are short of housing facilities, labor and manufacturing facilities. They have closed up shops in Milwaukee, Utah, and one factory in Kansas City; but they are still operating in the East. In my plant, we are not working more than 50 per cent of maximum capacity, but we have a surplus of manpower and plenty of housing facilities.

"The best brains don't go into the big companies, or they get out of them when they do get in. Small business will survive, despite the growing power of the big boys, as long as it keeps the best brains."

As Berlin, Wisconsin, Views It . . .

Editor W. H. Patey and a lot of people in Berlin, don't like big business because it reminds them of bureaucracy, and, in addition, the dislike of so-called monopolies is an old Wisconsin tradition. Yet even in this area, Mr. Patey does not see the situation without shades of distinction.

"There's Henry Kaiser, and Henry Ford, and Wendell Willkie. They have an attitude of helpfulness—not selfishness. Take Henry Kaiser. He hasn't anything against unions as such. When they are well managed, he says they take half the load off him in getting out production. Willkie wants to fight labor racketeers, but he will fight for the men in the unions. But he's against the cheap racketeers who farm labor—make their living from cheating workers."

Reply That Should Answer Multitude of Questions

During a question period following a lecture, a man arose and put a foolish query to the speaker. The latter replied:

"The logic of your question makes me think of another. Can you tell me why fire engines are always red? You can't? Well, fire-engines have four wheels and eight men. Four and eight are twelve. Twelve inches make a foot. A foot is a ruler. Queen Elizabeth was a ruler. The Queen Elizabeth is the largest ship that sails the seven seas. Seas have fish. Fish have fins. The Finns fight the Russians. The Russians are red. Fire-engines are always rushin'. Therefore, fire-engines are always red."

"I hope this answers your question also."

Torpedoes From Planes

A warplane, when firing a torpedo, must travel very close to the water so the projectile will land horizontally. If the plane is too high, which occasionally happens, the torpedo may strike the surface at too sharp an angle, flip over backward and travel in the opposite direction.

Catching Soup-Fin Sharks Is a Lucrative Business

To catch soup-fin sharks, West coast fishermen now use large hooks, baited with mullet or kingfish, that dangle at the end of six-foot chains, says Collier's. They are hung at 25-foot intervals along a 1,000-foot master chain.

Within a day or two, the catch of three long chains usually averages 25 sharks, whose livers alone, owing to the heavy demand for their oil, have a market value of some $4,500.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Inflatable rubber barges for the U. S. Navy are "cured" at B. F. Goodrich in a steam vulcanizer that is 42 feet long, 10½ feet in diameter, weighs 35 tons and has a door that alone weighs 10 tons. It's a record for size and turns out the 25-foot barges at a rate of one every 50 minutes.

Synthetic rubber plants already completed and those scheduled for construction will have an annual rated capacity of 850,000 long tons. Before the war the United States consumed about 600,000 long tons of rubber annually. Now, however, our supplies must be shared with the United Nations.

From the Stars and Stripes, African Edition, "Pupent Poets" department:

WHEN I RETURN

When I return
I want no blare of trumpets,
Cheering, shouting noise.
I want no wild acclaim,
People shrieking madly
"Hats off, here come our boys!"

When I return
Just make it quiet
And calmly grip my hand
Look into my eyes once more—
I'll understand.

Then let me see the beauty of homes,
Trees and the valleys,
Places I once knew,
The things we once took for granted
'Til war hid them from view.

I want no blare of trumpets,
Cheering, shouting . . . noise.
Just let me see you smile—
Forgotten is the war.

Dearest even now I need those things,
When I return, much more.
